Номокоме, SEPTEMBER 1478., 1876.

WITHOUT the smallest desire to needlessly cavil at the acts of the British Minister. or any wish to find fault with what must necessarily be a difficult undertaking-negotiating over three days, will commence on Friday, the with the Chinese Authorities -- it seems to us. as to most outsiders, that the stoppage of the Hitch, Hart, Low, Paterson, Wainswright, was a great mistake. There can be little doubt set for decision on the first day, and seven each that Sir Thomas Wade was actuated by the finishing with a burdle race, and the meeting best of motives in requesting the proprietors winding up with a steeplechase. All the opposition displayed to the undertaking has been offered by officials, who have lost no opportunity the Osaka Mint. showing their hostility and endeavouring t excite popular feeling against it. In the latter, however, they have failed signally, for no foreign introduction into China has been so well and cordially received by the common people as this little pioneer railway. the officials perceive in it what the people do not. of the innovation and their fruitless attempts to rouse the populace to make demonstrations the stemmer Spark, has received instructions of Leung Amon, residing in the same bonso, against it. Foiled in their efforts in thi direction, it was next sought to gain a instant, Captain Moreton taking his place in Colony, reprieve from the dreaded iron horse, and to the Spark, postpone the opening of the line throughoutits entire length, which had been fixed to take place about the commencement of the present month. In this they were more successful; the British Minister proved easier of persussion than the native mob. The open ing of the line has been put off until an apparently indefinite period to please a Government which is unwilling, on its part, to make any concession in return.

It is difficult to understand what are the real grounds on which Sir THOMAS WADE has acted. He had nothing to do with the not sufficient to defray their expenses. railway, and his request to the promoters to discontinue the traffic certainly seems an uncalled-for concession to Chinese whim or prejudice. As a writer in our Shanghai contemporary remarks, the stoppage of the railway bears a family likeness to the surrender of the opium at Canton, by order of Captain ELLIOTT. It must of course entail a considerable loss upon the proprietors, which they will either have to be indemnified for or they will suffer grievous wrong. The Chinese Government may have it in contemplation to purchase the line; but that would not affect ito nuestion in the smallest degree. What object they had in desiring its stopping except to bring it under the scops of the negotiations, and so derive some possible advantage in setting up a grievance on their part, it is impossible to conjecture. This seems the most likely explanation of their conduct. The arrest on a warrant of DAVID Banks, the driver of the train which passed over a Chiuaman who voluntarily placed bianself on the line with the evident intention field, and the drawing created considerable inof committing suicide, would seem to bear terest and amusement. An inquest was held on the body, at which if was distinctly proved that the driver took all conecivable precautions, when he saw the man on the line-by blowing the whietle, applying the breaks, and shutting off the steam-to prevent the catastrophe. There is no evidence to justify such a proceeding, and there can be no doubt of the issue of his trial. It is possible, of course, that Sir Thomas Wade is anxious to prove to the Chinese that they shall have the most perfeet fairness and justice dealt out by the British Authorities. But surely this is alike uncalled for and unjust to the engine driver. Really these concessions to Chinese officials can only be regarded as political blunders.

NANKING. A correspondent asks whether some steps could not be taken to improve the landing accommodation for passengers to and from Nanking. In place of the wretched hovels erected for the accommodation of steamer passengers. which existed a few years ago, each of the three companies who share the traffic of the Yangteze amongst them, have now put up a comfortable brick built station, capable of accommodating 100 to 180 Chinese passengers. Of the three stations, that of the C. N. Company is much the best, and contains a room or two in which European might pass a night, much better than in any house he would be able to get in the city. But the landing is still effected by boats, for which it is now high time that some other substitute was introduced, for, owing to the breadth of the giver, and the great numbers of passengers who have frequently to be landed, serious acoident will somer or later take place. Apart from the extraordinary increase of passengers to Nanking, which takes place at eramination times, that which constitutes the average. brought-by-each-steamer-is much-too-great-forthe boat accommo lation which exists. It is piracle that no accident has yet occurred, for night and day, and in all wenthers, you constantly see as many as 40 or 50 men, carrying an extraordinary amount of luggage, put into one boat, when, as they cannot sit down, the least unsteadiness on their part would certainly precipitate them into the river, and drown every soul. Why cannot the companies come to some understanding, and cease to goto the expense of keeping up three boat stations, with boats, crews, &c., &c., for each? Why cannot they work together? As their steamers pass on different days, and as passengers always. ake the first, it would be impossible for their interests to clash. The money spent in putting ap the three stations could not come to much short of $3,000, a sum for which they might have put up a really good house with both European nd thinese accommodation. Properly put before the Chinese authorities, it ought not, to be a difficult matter to get them to allow a passenger wharf to be erected. Nanking is now the largest pocket. He afterwards saked the second passeoger station between Shanghai and Hanrow. The number of passengers going and coming by steamer, exclusive of szamination cannot be short of 2,000 per month; but even simbling a up of charmed water, and taking a for contracts for failways in Russia it will be He then took them all to the station. JAPANESE BANKING. "Live and learn" is a very good old English saw: but we think that "pay and lears" is practical one, the correctness of which some which the editor of that paper tried to prove that the foreign banks, with the exception of the Oriental Bank Corporation, had not capital enough to carry on their operations, and ought to her pardon for their impertinence, in refusing to ancept in payment the notes of the native banks. At the time that the Mainichi offusions, the foreign hanks were very hard pressed in consequence of the extraordinary deman t which had arisen for dollars, conrequest upon a sudden inquiry for silk, unprecedented at least so early in the season. at a moment when dollars were extremely searce both in China and here as well as in America. Such a atom of metallic plethors, to them unoteses

We shall surprise no one by expressing our conviction that the native banks, the Second National late Shosha Bank, in particular, have but a very limited knowledge of banking business. Anybody, even with a good deal of experience, mig have been, under similar circumstauces, at a loss to find proper and reasonable means of coping with such an embarrae de richesee. . It must be remembered that just about the time we speak of, that is a month ago, the exchange was already somewhat higher than it had been some weeks before, may about 4a for bank paper at 6 months' sight. There was further every reason to believe that the excessive-demand for dollars, compled w..h great sourcity, would cause a rapid advance, but that the rates would recede again to a lower level; as soon as supplies were received from abroad to relieve the market. The Second National Bank sought the advice of several foreign houses, and decided upon investing its superabandant capital in bills on Enrope, begin ning st 4 . 2d. per deller on to 4 . 3 h or 48. 33d. to the extent of from eight hundred thousand to one million of dollars. It cannot be denied that the idea was not at all badly conceived, nor was it inopportunely carried out; but it was an entirely now move on the part of the native bank, in direct competition with the foreign establish. menta: and it was not to be supposed that the latter would let their opponent go on and take their business out of their hands, without an effort to small the game of the adversary if they was not won yet: nay it is at this juncture that the motto of "pay and learn" receives its illustration. The native bank baying sent the bills home for acceptance, foully hoped that the course of exchange would soon recede and that a good profit would be the natural result of its maiden operation. Also for the uncertainty of events, or the wickednes of the foreign ounks! Instead of going down nguin, the exchange has maintained ever since a steady unward ten lenoy, with every probability of emuining where it is at present, that is about per sent, higher on an average than the rates it which the Shosha hought; the clear result of the brilliant operation of the latter being a ose of not far from $60 000, which we trust "The Grateful Announcement of Loo Lien-kai: will be considered us a sufficiently high premium paid by the Japanese bankers for t apprenticeship. MR. MARGARY'S EXCEDITION

speaking of the Margary expedition says :---In the endeavour to account for the disastrous saue of an expedition so bonefully began, one's attention becomes arrested by one main fact viz. the strange difference between the methods by which the people of Yannan and those of he Central and Eastern Provinces manifested their hostility. That the feelings of the people towards Mr. Margary-should have so completely changed during the three or four weeks which alapsed between his departure for Bhamowhere be joined Colonel Browne's party-and his return to Manwyne, may well excite surprise, but the really suggestive fact is that while the bostile deminstrations in place like Ohen-Yuanfu were, apparently, the unpremeditated work of street "roughs," those at Manwyne proceeded on a definite plan, to which the Chinese and the semi-independent border clans alike were parties. Again, the officials in the Cant and Eastern Provinces nover considered it necessary to put Margary on his guard against the possiblity of an attack on his life dently prepared for an outbreak, not one of them took any pains whatever to prevent it. It seems absurd to imagine that a general and says, the murder at M mwyne was merely an neident-could have taken place without their knowledge. To put the case in another way :-How can one reconcile the murder at Manayne and the attack at Seray, with the fact that the man whose word was law in the country-the famous Li-Sich-Tai, residing at Manwyng -was professedly the warm friend of Margary and his companions P Li, despot of the district, and destroyer of the Panthay robels, hints to the local chiefs that they ought not to madest the English; and then they go out of their way to defy him. In a word, the faute point to the conclusion that the fatal assault on the English party had the active, or at least the" moral. annors of the district officials, and of General Li especially. Offering this as a provisional explanation, we will now state a few facts which seem to corroborate it. Seven years ago Li was . the aworn foe of the English; he it was who defeated Sladen's expedition in 1888. Sladen was in active communication with the Panthay rabela: it was under their protection that he penetrated China as for as Momein. This circumstance, together with the despatch of a Panthay envoy to Lo don, led the Chinese to believe that the Englis I wore lengued with the Panthave to destroy the unity of the Empire. at all events it is notorious that Sladen's spedition had the effect of arousing the Peking wernment to make a gigantic-and as it turned out successful-effort to suppless the rebellion. Not, however, until about eightcom months ago were its last fires stamped out. In other words, the Yannan Chinese have bad hardly time to take breath after their horrible task of suppression, before another expedition, of the exact pattern of Shalen's, appears before their actonished gaze. But why, it may be naked, were the Minwyne people so very kind Ibian, until they heard that he was returning from Blamo with a party of his countrymen. ander the escort of Burmese and Sikh guards. magnified by their wild imagination into an army. Under the diream stances, it would have been unnecessary for an astate person like Li to give positive orders for an attack on the strangers; a shrug of the shoulders, or the merely negative hint of keeping out of the way, would have been sufficient. It is a suspicious circumstance that Li's crony, the chief of Serny, played a prominent part in the attack on Colonel Browne's position. The whost of a wink might have encouraged the panio-struck sarages to commit marder, and now it will be extremely difficult to lay the responsibility for the oatrage on anybody in particular. Wa feel pretty certain that the Grosvenor Commission of inquiry will never succeed in throwing more light on the subject than we have done in the foregoing sentences. The story about the fifteen prisoners means little or nothing. A Chinese mandarin one at any moment unearth any number of persons implicated; and the vigour with which be sends innocent persons to be hanged, drawn and quartered, is too frequently in direct preportion to the intimacy of his own private
